OVERVIEW

Winter 2020 at The Power Plant

At The Power Plant, we aim to challenge and inform, while engaging in open dialogue with our visitors, artists and the many communities we serve. Our Winter 2020 exhibitions, programs and publications have been conceived with the belief that art is a critical catalyst for understanding the past and present.

This season, solo exhibitions by Naufus Ramírez-Figueroa (Guatemala/Canada) and Dawit L. Petros (Eritrea/Canada) join exhibitions by Rashid Johnson (USA) and Naeem Mohaiemen (Bangladesh/UK), on view since Fall 2019.

Asymmetries, Ramírez-Figueroa’s mid-career survey, highlights previous works and new commissions. The exhibition’s title refers to the distorted information at play in the history of the artist’s home country of Guatemala, in relation to Spanish colonization and the brutal realities of the Guatemalan Civil War (1960–96). Similarly, Petros investigates stories that have been relegated to the footnotes of history. His work explores layers of Italian colonialism, its link to modernist architecture in Eritrea and Canada and its relation to contemporary migrations between Africa, Europe and North America.

Mohaiemen’s exhibition continues with the films Two Meetings and a Funeral (2017) and Asfan’s Long Day. The Young Man Was: Part 2 (2014), with accompanying “footnotes” providing additional context. Johnson’s Anxious Audience also remains on view, posing vital questions about identity, memory and politics.

Learn about exhibiting artists’ processes during a Performative Lecture by Dawit L. Petros and guest curator Irene Campolmi and an In Conversation program with Naufus Ramírez-Figueroa and curator Lauren Barnes. In addition, our Sunday Scene series brings in speakers from across disciplines to offer dynamic perspectives about current exhibitions.

Community engagement remains at the forefront of our offerings. The Power Youth program connects youth ages 12–17 with local artists, and works from these sessions will be on display at the Spring Exhibition in May. Portfolio Nights and Master Classes provide Artist Members the opportunity to discuss their work with curators, exhibiting artists and special guests.

Our annual fundraiser, Face to Face, is not to be missed. Held on 26 February 2020, this event brings Toronto’s cultural leaders and art patrons together with notable artists for an intimate dinner and conversation.

We are determined to ensure our exhibitions and programs are accessible to all. With the support of the Ontario Trillium Foundation, we are now able to provide audio recordings of wall texts, select programs with American Sign Language interpreters and outreach workshops, among other initiatives.

We invite you to join us in celebrating the power of art and the conversations it inspires.

Gaëtane Verna, Director
Naufus Ramírez-Figueroa produces sculptures, performance works and paintings that draw on literature, Latin American history, folklore, contemporary conspiracy theories and childhood memories. Referring to traumatic or tragic events—in particular Guatemala’s Civil War (1960–96), which forced Ramírez-Figueroa and certain members of his family to immigrate to Vancouver as refugees in the 1980s—his works are imbued with a playful, sometimes dream-like quality. Using both sculptural objects and his body, Ramírez-Figueroa creates scenarios and installations that bring to light unbalanced power relations in the history of Guatemala and beyond.

Asymmetries encompasses works from the past decade in addition to three new commissions, two of which are sculptures inspired by objects associated with acts of carrying and containment. The chosen objects represent various forms of colonial domination and control. The other is a cast-aluminum cacaxte, a ladder-like carrier common among Indigenous populations of Latin America, who, under colonialism, were forced to physically carry explorers and their bounty using this tool. Ramírez-Figueroa reimagines the Wardian case and cacaxte in light of his own history, investigating the ways in which personal and cultural identities might expand and evolve over time, particularly as they move from one place to another.

Lastly, Heart of the Scarecrow is a newly commissioned performance video looking back at the staging of a play of the same name by Guatemalan playwright Hugo Carrillo (1929–1994). Upon learning that a version of the same play involving Ramírez-Figueroa’s uncle was violently censored by the 1975 Guatemalan government, the artist became interested in its anti-establishment message, reimagining it several times in different media and locales. For the iteration at The Power Plant, Ramírez-Figueroa restages the production at the Universidad Popular in Guatemala City, the original site of the censorship.

The artist’s reimagining of these objects and stories calls to attention what has been lost, manipulated or left out of the colonizer’s history. Simultaneously, Ramírez-Figueroa’s artworks evoke the burdens that are carried—collectively and individually, physically and psychologically—and underline the importance of imagination in overcoming them.

Naufus Ramírez-Figueroa (b. 1978 in Guatemala City, Guatemala, lives and works in Guatemala) holds a BFA from Emily Carr University and an MFA from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. He was a post-graduate researcher at Jan Van Eyck Academie in 2013. He has had solo exhibitions at institutions including New Museum, New York; Haus Esters, Krefeld, Germany; and CAPC Bordeaux, France. He has participated in various group exhibitions including the 57th Venice Biennale; 53rd Internationale Kurzfilmtage Oberhausen; Home Works IV (Ashkal Alwan, Beirut, Lebanon); Illy Present Future (2013); Castello di Rivoli, Italy; the 10th Gwangju Biennale; and the 52nd Bienal de Sao Paulo. In 2015, the CORPUS network commissioned a new body of performance work. Ramírez-Figueroa is a recipient of a Guggenheim fellowship, a Franklin Furnace award, an Akademie Schloss Solitude fellowship, the ARCO Comunidad de Madrid for young artists, the DAAD Berliner Künstlerprogramm and the 2017 Mies Van der Rohe Award.
Dawit L. Petros presents a new body of work underlining the unexplored links between colonization, migrations and modernism. Spazio Disponibile—Italian for ‘Available Space’—scrutinizes historical gaps in European memory, particularly that of modern Italy. Alluding to vacant advertising sections that appeared in Rivista Coloniale, a widely circulated early 20th century magazine and the official organ of the Italian colonial project, the title is also a reference to the colonial gaze that viewed the lands of Africa as ‘available’ space to occupy and exploit.

Petros’s art reflects his research into the complex layers of colonial and postcolonial histories connecting East Africa and Europe. Employing archival materials collected over a period of seven years, documents that attest to Italian presence in Ethiopia and Eritrea between the late 19th and early 20th centuries, Petros has developed an expansive suite of works that reflect on the lingering effects of colonial memory. Composed of a multimedia installation of serigraphs, photographs, sculptural works, a film and soundscape, the works highlight ties between the contemporary resurgence of nationalism and a suppressed colonial past.

The exhibition extends the artist’s ongoing project, The Stranger’s Notebook—the result of a thirteen-month journey exploring mobilities within Africa and across the Mediterranean—to focus on built forms including architecture, industries and infrastructures, as well as questions of labour, the pitfalls of nationhood and intertwined narratives of migration. A newly commissioned film on the Casa d’Italia, a community centre built in 1936 in Montreal, probes the building’s graphic and architectural language to unpack its complicated fascist symbolism. Examining parallels between African histories and European modernism, the exhibition also investigates how objects often operate as texts in the construction and transmission of cultural ideologies. Petros looks at how these objects often obscure power differentials while connecting people across borders, binding disparate geographies such as Italy, Eritrea and Canada.

Dawit L. Petros (b. 1972 in Eritrea) lives and works in Chicago and Montreal. He received his MFA in Visual Art from the School of the Museum of Fine Arts/Tufts University, a BFA in Photography from Concordia University, a BFA in History from the University of Saskatchewan and completed the Whitney Independent Study Program in New York. Recent exhibitions have been held at the 13th Havana Biennial in Matanzas, Cuba (2019); Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art, Cornell University (2019); Bamako Encounters Biennale, Mali (2017); Dakar Biennale, Senegal (2018); Prospect.4, New Orleans (2017); and the Walther Collection Project Space, New York (2016). Petros is an Assistant Professor at the Department of Photography, School of the Art Institute of Chicago.
Naeem Mohaiemen grew up in Dhaka, Bangladesh and now lives in New York. His work across films, installations and essays excavates historical moments via fiction, documentary and archives. Overlapping micro stories and macro histories underpin his projects, which start from transnational leftist utopian projects that took place in the 1970s, the first decade of Mohaiemen’s life and a period of clashes between decolonization, socialism, non-alignment and new forms of imperialism.

This exhibition spans two seasons, presenting four films in a rotating program. Each film is called a ‘chapter’ and is accompanied variously by photographs, prints and sculptures that serve as ‘footnotes’, which further expand on the films’ themes. Encountered in the corridor space preceding the screening room, these footnotes both complement and complicate the films, upending the typical sequence in which we consume information, and underlining the artist’s attention to the seemingly ‘minor.’

Screening from 25 January to 15 March, the three-channel film Two Meetings and a Funeral (2017) probes a pivot of power in the 1970s from the Non-Aligned Movement (the anti-imperialist coalition of states not allied to the United States or the Soviet Union) toward the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (an alliance of Muslim-majority countries). Images of triumphalist transnational architecture and documentary footage from the 1973 political congress come together in a narrative woven by publisher Samia Zennadi, political leader Zonayed Saki and historian Vijay Prashad that uncovers a history of the Cold War period from a previously hidden perspective.

From 18 March, the exhibition concludes with Afsan’s Long Day (2014), a film that considers parallel histories of radical struggles in the 1970s. Accounts from the 1974 diary of Bangladeshi historian Afsan Chowdhury and footage relating to the militant Red Army Faction in Germany form part of a wide-ranging investigation into the stories of people that shaped what the narrator describes as “the ‘what if’ moment of the last century”.

While both films focus on moments of misrecognition and failure, Mohaiemen’s overarching investigation into the various ways in which the political left attempted to implement socialist utopias during the Cold War era is ultimately rooted in a hope for a future international left.

Naeem Mohaiemen (b. 1969 in London, UK) lives in New York. His work has recently been exhibited at SALT Beyoğlu, Istanbul (2019); Mahmoud Darwish Museum, Ramallah (2018); Vassas Federation of Metalworkers’ Union, Budapest (2018); Abdur Razzaq Foundation, Dhaka (2017) and documenta 14, Athens/Kassel (2017). In Canada, he has previously shown at Hot Docs (2012), A Space Gallery (Images Festival, 2012), Gallery TPW (Images Festival, 2013) and VOX–Centre de l’image contemporaine (2016). Mohaiemen co-edited (with Lorenzo Fusi) System Error: War is a Force That Gives Us Meaning (Papesse, 2006) and is currently co-editing (with Eszter Szakacs) Solidarity Must be Defended (Tranzit/Van Abbe/Salt/Tricontinental, 2019). In New York, he was a member of Visible Collective (2002–07), 3rd i South Asian Film (2000–04) and Samar: South Asian Magazine for Action and Reflection (1995–99); in Dhaka, he was a member of Drishtipat (2001–11) and Alal O Dulal (2012–17). He was a Guggenheim Fellow (2014) and was short-

For his first solo presentation in Canada, American artist Rashid Johnson stages a major new site-specific commission. Entering the Clerestory, we find ourselves surrounded by two monumental tiled panels, each containing an accumulation of nearly one hundred faces.

Ricocheting between the opposing walls of this narrow passage, these works are a continuation of Johnson’s series known as Anxious Audiences. The product of what Johnson has referred to as ‘drawing through erasure’, in which digging and scratching reveals faces within thickly layered black surfaces, each of these fields registers a character using the most basic inscriptions of personhood.

Johnson’s work harnesses the rich symbolism and histories of varied materials that have personal meaning and at times are signifiers of greater African-American cultural identity. Black soap, made from the ashes of burned plant matter and commonly used in West Africa, is mixed with wax and applied as pigment onto the white tiled surface—for Johnson, a way of complicating associations of cleanliness and healing. The rigidly uniform support equally evokes the tiles of subway stations as well as rational grids of minimalist art, and through Johnson’s frenetically incised portraits a vivid impression of human presence emerges.

Johnson’s Anxious Audiences first came about from a desire to transmit his personal experience of anxiety, especially heightened by a political climate of increasing division in the United States. This audience scrutinizes us as viewers as much as the other way around. They are witnesses. Though these faces are presented on a shared plane, their solidarity is ambiguous: do we interpret them as united with a sense of togetherness in the face of collective unease, or might we understand this as an amassing of disparate individual experiences?

Above, high on the beams that run across the space, ceramic pots house a series of tropical plants. Each pot becomes a member of this audience, a face carved roughly into its surface. But on this alternative plane, high above the crowd, these vessels introduce a life force, a sense of potential, of caretaking and community.

Rashid Johnson (b. 1977 in Chicago, Illinois) is based in New York City. He studied at School of the Art Institute, Chicago (2004–05) and Columbia College, Chicago (2000). Recent solo exhibitions include Aspen Art Museum, Colorado (2019); Museo Tamayo, Mexico City (2019); David Kordansky Gallery, Los Angeles (2018); Milwaukee Art Museum, WI (2017); Kemper Museum of Contemporary Art, Kansas City, MO (2017); Garage Museum of Contemporary Art, Moscow (2016); Hauser & Wirth, New York (2016); The Drawing Center, New York (2015); South London Gallery, London, UK (2012); and MCA Chicago (2012). He has participated in numerous international exhibitions including Yorkshire Sculpture International (2019) and the 54th Venice Biennale (2011). He received the Tony Goldman Visionary Artist Award (2017) and the David C. Driskell Prize (2012).

#PowerKidsTO

Power Kids on Family Day
Monday, 17 February 2020, 1–4 PM
Join us on this special drop-in Family Day workshop led by special guests, Toronto-based arts organization Stolen from Africa, presented in conjunction with Harbourfront Centre’s Kuumba festival. Participants will work together to create a family tree using photographic elements and poetry.

Building Worlds Together
Sunday, 23 February 2020, 3–5 PM
Architecture is the design of structures and buildings. Artist Dawit L. Petros looks at how architecture influences the character of a place and its history. In this workshop, participants will construct a layered and three-dimensional cityscape or landscape using photographic images and drawing.

Fairytale Remix
Sunday, 15 March 2020, 3–5 PM
Naufus Ramírez-Figueroa uses performance as a way to experiment. Drawing inspiration from his interest in folklore, participants in this workshop will create sock puppets. Using socks, textiles and other accessories, we will remix characters from fairy tales—and create our own!

Take Care
Sunday, 5 April 2020, 3–5 PM
One aspect of Rashid Johnson's site-specific installation are tropical plants that inspire caregiving and a sense of community. In response, we will use textiles to create two (or more) wearable pins with words of affirmation. Participants are encouraged to keep one of their creations, and give the other pins to people in their family or community.

Your Life, Your Movie Poster
Sunday, 29 March 2020, 3–5 PM
In Naeem Mohaiemen’s exhibition What we found after you left, film and other visuals go hand in hand to tell stories about family histories and national events. In this workshop, participants will create a movie poster, mounted on wooden panels, to highlight a memorable moment from your life using drawing and collage.

My Neighbourhood Postcard
Sunday, 19 April 2020, 3–5 PM
In the exhibition Spazio Disponibile, Dawit L. Petros looks at the history of architecture in the Horn of Africa. We will consider how the artist draws inspiration from the building styles, and how that relates to buildings in our neighborhoods. Then using paint and print-making techniques we will create postcards of our neighborhood.

Crazy Hats
Sunday, 10 May 2020, 3–5 PM
A hat is worn to cover the head for various reasons and is accessorized for self-expression. Drawing from Naufus Ramírez-Figueroa’s interest in how we are affected by the environment that surrounds us, participants in this workshop will customize hats using paper, textiles and more.
Power Youth

This outreach program connects youth ages 12 to 17, members of our partner organizations’ sites in priority neighbourhoods, with local professional artists in a 15-week program. The sessions at each site are led by contemporary Artists-in-Residence selected by the youth. Sessions include art-making, a visit to The Power Plant, and culminate with a youth art exhibition. Power Youth is organized by Lorena Almaraz, Power Youth Coordinator, and facilitated by Charmae Freeman, Power Youth Teaching Assistant.

with Quincy Morales

This Fall, youth at the Humber and Spruce clubhouses had the opportunity to work with hip hop artist Quincy Morales as Artist-in-Residence. Quincy’s program took youth on a journey of musical exploration, from learning about rhymes, cadence and songwriting, to practicing the business skills needed for an independent artistic practice.

Expressive Painting
with Hana Elmisry

Youth at the TP Loblaw Clubhouse at St. Mary Catholic School selected painter and arts educator Hana Elmisry as their Artist-in-Residence. Each Wednesday, youth learned about the technical and conceptual aspects of mark-making, working with a variety of experimental painting techniques while engaging in discussions about the self, perception, authenticity and autonomy.

Experimental Photography
with Hannah Doucet

Participants at Neptune worked with visual artist and arts educator Hannah Doucet. Hannah’s program introduced youth to the infinite possibilities of photography, using images as a starting point and expanding upon them with mixed media. The program balanced the technical aspects of photography with creative hands-on activities like cyanotype printing and collage.

Arts + Letters Press launches art + reading issue 2, Entanglement and SYSTEM Sounds

Saturday, 18 January 2020, 1 PM

Lakeside Terrace, Harbourfront Centre

Free

Co-presented with The Power Plant, Arts + Letters Press launches issue 2 of their international publication art + reading, a journal about reading and making. This edition explores the theme – Deep Time – and emphasizes collaborative strategies of making and storytelling, and the entanglements of art and science specifically. The central interview is with astronomer Doug Welch (McMaster University, Canada) and photo-based artist Dianne Bos (Canada and France) who collaborated on a project called “Light Echo”.

Other contributors to this issue include artist Anna Madelaine (Australia) who incorporates augmented reality in her work; curator Nancy Campbell (Canada) and Inuk artist Shuvinai Ashoona (Kimmirut/Cape Dorset, Canada); textile and multi-media artist Meghan Price (Canada); artist, mapmaker and geologist Suzanne Nacha (Canada); and Aboriginal artist Judy Watson (Australia), to name a few.

Accompanying the launch is a multimedia sci-art performance by contributors, astro-physicist and musician Matt Russo, jazz musician Andrew Santaguido and vocalist Thom Gill. SYSTEM Sounds is their project that converts astronomical data into music, sound and visualizations, revealing the hidden rhythms and harmonies of planetary orbits.

Master Class for Emerging Curators

Saturday, 25 January 2020, 1 – 4 PM

The Power Plant

Free for Members

Contemporary art curators work with artists to select artworks for exhibitions, commission new artworks, write interpretive texts, and often contribute ideas for engaging public programs.

Emerging curators who are members are invited to engage with Irene Campolmi, guest curator of Dawit L. Petros’ Spazio Disponibile.

Campolmi is an independent curator whose research focuses on various performative endeavours that think through postcolonial and feminist theories. Her doctoral thesis touches upon ethics and sustainability in contemporary curating.

Participants will be invited to share their curatorial methodologies, and reflect on how personal stories may relate to broader histories and narratives, especially in the context of exhibition-making.

This Master Class is limited to 10 members. To register or to become a member, please contact membership@thepowerplant.org or call 416-954-4235.

The Power Plant

Free for ARTIST Members

Dawit L. Petros

Sunday, 19 January 2020, 1 – 5 PM

Dawit L. Petros’ evocative work straddles photography and sculptural installation. His practice is informed by research into global modernisms, theories of diaspora and post-colonial studies. Artist Members are invited to meet with Petros for a facilitated critique of their artwork. Each participant will have up to 15 minutes to discuss up to 8 images and/or videos of recently completed artworks or ongoing series.

Master Classes are limited to eight Artist Members. To register or to become a member, please contact membership@thepowerplant.org or call 416-954-4235.

ARTIST TALK
Marcelo Brodsky

Wednesday, 29 January 2020, 7PM
STUDIO THEATRE, HARBORFRONT CENTRE
FREE

During this artist talk, in the Latin American-Canadian Art Projects’s Latin American Speaker Series — co-presented by The Power Plant and Lala Contemporary — artist Marcelo Brodsky (b. 1954) will discuss his work in art and human rights.

Brodsky, who lives and works in Buenos Aires, Argentina, combines text and images to convey meaning and to build up alternative narratives. He has been exhibited widely resulting in photo books including Buena Memoria, Nexo, Memory under construction, Once@9:53 Visual Correspondences, Tree time, and 1968 The Fire of Ideas. Brodsky’s work is in many collections, including the National Museum of Fine Arts, Buenos Aires, Argentina; Tate, London, England, UK; Museum of Fine Arts, Houston; Sprengel Museum, Hannover; and Museum of Memory and Human Rights, Santiago de Chile. Additionally, he has represented Argentina in several international biennials in Lyon, Rotterdam, São Paulo and Valencia.

In addition to visual art, Brodsky is founder of the Parque de la Memoria, a large monument and art exhibition space to honour and remember the victims of Argentina’s military dictatorship, as well as Visual Action, an NGO dedicated to transferring visual expertise to NGOs. In 2008, he was given the B’nai B’rith Award for Human Rights in Argentina (2008), and in 2014, he was granted the Dr. Jean Mayer Award (2014) for his human rights and artistic work by the Global Leadership Institute at Tufts University, Boston, USA.

GALLERY READING & CONVERSATION

Writer, art critic and anthropological researcher James Oscar contributed to Power Plant Pages No. 13 about Rashid Johnson’s installation, Anxious Audience.

Within global visual culture, representations of figures witnessing History at important political conjunctures (war, genocide, the strifes of forced labour, etc.) as well as in moments of joy, celebration and religious elation are abundant. These witnessing stares have been well documented in photographic images; staring figures populate Tran Bang’s photo of the naked Vietnamese child after a Napalm bombing; the Vaudoun participants in Maya Deren’s Divine Horsemen are memorable for their ecstatic gazes; so are the fixed looks of anti-apartheid protestors as they joyously convene at the rendezvous of social justice’s victories. From the history of art, one might recall the vacant gaze of Tintoretto in his Self Portrait, the knowing eyes of Klee’s Angelus Novus and rudimentarily drawn eyes of stick men photographed by Brassai in Paris in the 1930s. Now, we are faced with the glaring stares of Rashid Johnson’s Anxious Audience.

Using both an art historical analysis and a morphological analysis, James Oscar will present a visual anthropology of the stares of History’s witnesses as depicted in art. Oscar will also draw from more universal considerations to the particular contexts that frame Rashid Johnson’s depiction of a monumental anxious audience reciprocating the gaze of its viewer.

Expanding Access

Some visitors have been excluded from art galleries and museums because of limited-to-no accessibility options or inclusivity practices. But as a public institution, The Power Plant is striving to engage as many people as possible who are interested in contemporary art, whether near or far. Thanks to a Seed grant from the Ontario Trillium Foundation, The Power Plant introduces Expanding Access, programs as a beginning to welcome and better serve visitors who have lived experience with disability.

Navigating the Public Art Competition Process
Tuesday, 24 March 2020, 6:30–8 PM
MEZZANINE BOARDROOM, ARTPORT BUILDING, HARBOURFRONT CENTRE FREE
With the Percent for Public Art Program, the Toronto Official Plan encourages the inclusion of public art in all significant private sector developments across the City. This serves to beautify the buildings and open spaces of the urban landscape. It also serves to provide artists an additional creative platform and income potential.
The Power Plant co-presents a workshop for Artist Members led by Ben Mills, Vice President of Public Art Management and Dean Drever, artist.

During this workshop, participants will learn about the steps and stages involved in proposing, creating and installing public art for private sector developments. Mills and Drever will share strategies that can strengthen or weaken a proposal.
Ben Mills has spoken on the subject of public art at numerous conferences and events and, as a strong proponent of art in the public realm, he has managed and completed over 50 public art projects. Dean Drever is a Canadian sculptor, currently living and working in Toronto, who has completed numerous public art commissions including Bear with Salmon, commissioned for the Eckfoc Tower in Edmonton; Pass the Hat (2014), commissioned by Jim Shaw, and, Eagle Vt. commission for Ferncastle (Espanade Inc.) (2018).

This workshop is limited to 20 participants. By 25 February, please email info@thepowerplant.org to express your interest in participation, and include a current résumé. Those selected will be notified by March 17.

Art-making Workshops with Expanding Access Partners

By conducting outreach workshops at partner organizations, The Power Plant aims to provide arts education to individuals with physical disabilities, cancer and mental health challenges. Each of the three partners (Camp Oochigeas, The Centre for Addiction and Mental Health and March of Dimes) confirmed the robust demand for arts education in the communities they serve.
Individuals served by these organizations often face barriers to participation in arts education and cultural activities. By creating multiple entry points for cultural engagement, these underserved communities will gain the recognized benefits of participation in the arts, which include an enhanced sense of well-being, connectedness and civic pride, improved life satisfaction and better mental health.
video essay. The project, A Decade in Review, draws upon themes and moments of relevance to experiences of Blackness within a Canadian context over the past decade. This commission by Othello Grey is unique for its critical exploration of some of the moments that defined a decade, as well as its potential to challenge, inspire and educate audiences. This partnership supports Black-Canadian artistic expression and production by highlighting the cultural, political and intellectual contributions of Afro-diasporic communities in Toronto.

This program, part of the Urban Field Speakers Series, is co-presented by Prefix ICA and The Power Plant. Eszter Szakács and Naeem Mohaiemen edited the anthology Solidarity Must Be Defended, a tri-fold publication that brings together essays and projects on misalignments within the visual arts and(s) of transnational solidarity during the Cold War. The book looks at both grand initiatives and tragic misfires from an entangled, decolonizing world.

The point of departure for this anthology is a special issue of Mefasfera magazine (“Refractions of Socialist Solidarity”) edited in Budapest, Hungary by Szakács in connection with Mohaiemen’s film Two Meetings and a Funeral. The anthology’s tri-fold lightly reflects these geographies until the Second World War. The rest of the world took little notice of these land grabs; seeing the territory, its natural resources and its population as ripe with potential for economic exploitation. But how does this period in African and Italian history inform the current political climate, past and present migrations, and how have artists responded to its legacy?

This symposium will bring artist Dawit L. Petros, guest curator Irene Campolmi, and scholars together for an intellectual encounter.

SYMPOSIUM - SAVE THE DATE
Italy and East Africa: Unexplored Histories
Saturday, 21 March 2020
STUDIO THEATRE, HARBOURFRONT CENTRE FREE

To consider multiple perspectives about migrations, modernism, and Italian colonization in East Africa—the subject of Dawit L. Petros: Spazio Disponibile—in greater depth, The Power Plant presents a symposium with support of the Istituto Italiano di Cultura. Italy colonized Eritrea in 1890 and Ethiopia in 1935, controlling these geographies until the Second World War. The rest of the world took little notice of these land grabs; seeing the territory, its natural resources and its population as ripe with potential for economic exploitation. But how does this period in African and Italian history inform the current political climate, past and present migrations, and how have artists responded to its legacy?

This symposium will bring artist Dawit L. Petros, guest curator Irene Campolmi, and scholars together for an intellectual encounter.

FILM SERIES
Italian Colonial Cinema
Select Tuesdays, March and April 2020, 7 PM
STUDIO THEATRE, HARBOURFRONT CENTRE FREE

The Italian Fascist leader Benito Mussolini aimed to establish an Italian empire in Africa. In 1935, Mussolini provoked a political dispute with Abyssinian (modern Ethiopia) Emperor, Haile Selassie, as justification for a military invasion. While there was international outrage, there was no military action taken against Mussolini. After World War II, the Treaty of Peace with Italy (1947) ended all of Italy’s overseas possessions, and yet there remain some relations between Italy and its former colonies.

In the context of Dawit L. Petros’s exhibition, Spazio Disponibile, this film series looks back to filmmakers contemporary with Mussolini and more recent cinematic works examining Italy’s entanglement with Africa.

Slow Art Day
Saturday, 4 April 2020, 1 PM
THE POWER PLANT
FREE
Slow Art Day is a global event with a simple mission: Help more people discover the joy of looking at art. Held each year in April, Slow Art Day has more than 100 participating institutions from around the world, each encouraging visitors to look at art slowly. Following a period of observation, visitors meet to talk about their experiences. While invited to share personal associations with the art, participants can also make meaningful connections with others.

From 1 to 1:30 PM, we will look in silence at three artworks for 10 minutes each. Grab a lightweight stool, and a handout with suggestions of what to look for and questions to ponder. From 1:30 to 2 PM, we will facilitate a group discussion about your observations and insights. In the end, participants should feel empowered to see and experience art without an expert (or expertise).

This graphic biography follows artist and activist Herb Perr from a mob-linked Jewish family in Brighton Beach, through the studios of Robert Motherwell and Mark Rothko, Reagan-era art activism and a reckoning with the responsibilities of raising a family. In his stunning debut, Joey Perr tells his father’s story with sensitivity and warmth, bringing moments of deep struggle and bright comedy to life with equal panache.

Perr will be available for questions and signing copies of Hands Up, Herbie!—funded several times over by a Kickstarter campaign. The graphic biography is offset printed on Munken paper, with a sewn and glued binding. Buy a copy and have it signed!

Hands Up, Herbie! has received critical praise from art critic Lucy Lippard, artist Sabrina Jones and more!
"If you care about comics, or if you don’t care about comics, but you care about human beings, you should read this book.”
