As we enter The Power Plant’s last exhibition season of 2019, we pause to acknowledge the importance of the ALL YEAR, ALL FREE program. Thanks to the support of BMO Financial Group, the gallery is able to eliminate admission fees, enabling all visitors, young and old, to access our exhibitions. Join us all year long at The Power Plant, where admission is always FREE.

At The Power Plant we strive to present exhibitions that will resonate with many who call the land beneath their feet home, while simultaneously probing critical issues that currently affect millions around the world.

Our four Fall 2019 artists explore subjects that invite deep reflection on our current society. Informed by notions of resistance in the face of a changing world, the exhibitions emphasize ideas of collectivity and solidarity. The artists address how global mobility, forced or voluntary, defines modes of survival and belonging in the places we inhabit, inviting us to contemplate our relationships to the various terrains we are constantly obliged to traverse.

Rashid Johnson’s monumental commission for our Clerestory envelops us in Anxious Audience, a powerful work that raises questions about solidarity, identity and memory in our societies. With tropical plants reaching for the sunlight, the installation ponders our resilience in an increasingly polarized world. Alongside, we present a major new co-production by Vincent Meessen as part of his exhibition Blues Klair, a project that ties together histories of colonialism, displacement and emancipation of African populations.

Hajra Waheed’s intimate and intricate works bring together keen observations about the upheavals we are witnessing today and propose that resistance consists in finding hope in despair and in interrogating and overcoming the power structures that keep us shackled. Naeem Mohaiemen’s multi-part exhibition interweaves personal narratives with the national history of Bangladesh and transnational political movements. His migration stories are told through archival traces, personal histories and imaginary scenarios.

Public programs this Fall are not to be missed. You can hear from all exhibiting artists as part of our In Conversation series, together with Master Classes offered by Meessen and Waheed. We will also screen two films and have a spoken word performance related to Meessen’s exhibition. Our Sunday Scene talks will bring in diverse voices, each with a unique perspective, to complement the works on display in the galleries.

Additionally, we will co-present the Arctic/Amazon symposium with OCAD University, in advance of a major exhibition for Fall 2020. Our Power Talks presented at Art Toronto will feature artists and curators from Canada and Portugal. We will hold our 7th annual Student Night, as well as Power Youth and Power Kids programs. We also welcome group visits, and our knowledgeable Gallery Attendants are happy to answer questions and discuss your thoughts about our exhibitions and programs.

We invite you to join us in experiencing the many offerings of The Power Plant this Fall.

Gaëtane Verna, Director
Hajra Waheed translates research and observation into works that explore links between security, surveillance and the covert networks of power that structure our lives, while also addressing the traumas of displaced subjects affected by legacies of colonial and state violence.

Waheed’s most ambitious project to date, Hold Everything Dear takes a single form—the spiral—as a starting point to reflect on processes of upheaval in human experience. Partly inspired by a collection of essays on survival and resistance by art critic and novelist John Berger, the works act as a meditation on undefeated despair and the possibilities for radical hope.

Combining the handmade with mathematical precision, the exhibition brings together new works including a major site-specific installation, over 100 small-scale individual works on paper, a series of clay objects, a video installation, and sculpture. The works draw on spiraling patterns found in both natural and sociopolitical structures, from the miniscule to the monumental, from calm to chaos, and storm to sea. Together, they chart a course of exploration that reflects upon how we exist within and navigate these structures.

Many of the works visualize modes of resisting and overcoming tides of violence and despair, in various intimate, powerful ways. Some evoke ruptures or transference from one state of being to another, such as a collection of miracle fruit seeds, which have the capacity to change sourness to sweetness. Other works challenge our perceptions; a video work consisting of starling murmurations, seemingly monolithic at first, reveals upon closer observation a kaleidoscopic collective of individuals. Using the ordinary as a means to consider the profound, and landscape as a medium to transpose human struggle, the works, at times punctuated by prose, slip between investigating how power relations are imposed and how they may be transcended.

The artist would like to acknowledge Canada Council for the Arts and the Conseil des arts et des lettres du Québec for their support of this new work.

A related exhibition of Hajra Waheed’s work is currently on view at the Small Arms Inspection Building, 1352 Lakeshore Road E, Mississauga, as part of the Toronto Biennial of Art.

Hajra Waheed (born 1980 in Canada) lives and works in Montréal. Waheed has participated in exhibitions worldwide, including: Drawing Now: Contemporary Drawing from 1970 to Now, British Museum, London (2019); VIVA ARTE VIVA, International Exhibition of the 57th Venice Biennale (2017); 11th Gwangju Biennale, South Korea (2016); The Cyphers, BALTIC Centre for Contemporary Art, Gateshead, UK (2016); Still Against the Sky, KW Institute for Contemporary Art, Berlin (2015); L’avenir (Looking Forward), La Biennale de Montréal, Musée d’art contemporain de Montréal, QC (2014). She was shortlisted for the 2016 Sobey Art Award and received the 2014 Victor Martyn Lynch-Staunton Award for outstanding achievement as a Canadian mid-career visual artist. Waheed’s works can be found in permanent collections including MoMA, New York; British Museum, London; the National Gallery of Canada, Ottawa; the Centre Pompidou, Paris; Burger Collection, Hong Kong; and Devi Art Foundation, New Delhi.
Vincent Meessen
Blues Klair
21 September 2019 – 5 January 2020
Opening: 20 September 2019, 8 – 11 PM

Vincent Meessen is interested in history and in the construction of colonial modernity in the Western imaginary. Through a research process that is both systematic and speculative carried out in archives and on the ground, Meessen seeks to endow documents with a contextual agency. By linking them to people, objects and events whose intersection within a wide variety of media gives rise to new experiences, the exhibition becomes a site for testing history in terms of the present. The resulting trajectories effectively skew received discourses, proposing rich transcultural and political rereadings and rewritings.

At the heart of the exhibition is the projected film Ultramarine. Within the structure of layered textiles, blue is the chromatic, historical and discursive filter through which a performance by African-American poet Kain unfolds. The famed precursor of hip-hop in the late 60s delivers his “spoken word” as the Belgian percussionist Lander Gyselinck improvises to the flow of his utterances. Throughout the performance various historical objects — astrolabe, mappa mundi, automaton, textile, fresco, film stock — are juxtaposed with Kain’s performance props. They invoke affective retrospections on exile and belonging, slave routes and colonial trade.

These considerations connect with the unfinished literary project Blues Clair by the late French writer and passionate critic of jazz and film, Patrick Straram, who participated in the Lettrist project organized and circulated by the Leonard & Bina Ellen Art Gallery, Concordia University with the support of Canada Council for the Arts and the Conseil des arts et des lettres du Québec alongside Guy Debord in Paris, then lived in exile in Montreal from 1958. Associating text with the archival document, Meessen weaves a textual and formal narrative line interlacing these exiled figures. He also brings into the fold the Sir George Williams Affair, the 1969 racial protest movement led by West Indian students at what became Concordia University in Montreal, whose repercussions were to be felt all the way back to the Caribbean. The artist draws attention to the commonality of emancipatory movements from the past and endows them with poetry by reigniting their signs and images.

Narratives and destinies obscured by history meet in the shared ground of the exhibition, where they mobilize and enter into a dialogue through the forms they take, their inhabitation of space, the sounds that circulate within it, and colour as a lens for reading into the present.

Vincent Meessen (born 1971 in Baltimore, USA) lives and works in Brussels, Belgium. He represented Belgium at the 56th Venice Biennale (2015). Solo exhibitions include Printemps de Septembre, Toulouse (2018); Centre Georges Pompidou, Musée national d’art moderne, Paris (2018); BOZAR, Brussels (2017); Kunsthalle Basel (2015); KIOSK, Ghent (2015) and MUAC, Mexico City (2015-14). Meessen has also recently participated in group exhibitions at Württembergischer Kunstverein Stuttgart (2018) and Taipei Biennale (2016). His films have been shown in museums including Kiasma (Helsinki); MUMOK (Vienna); Museo Reina Sofia (Madrid) and Lincoln Center (New York), and in film festivals including IFFR (Rotterdam); IDFA (Amsterdam); Image Forum Festival (Tokyo) and FESPACO (Ouagadougou). Vincent Meessen is founding member of Jubilee, platform for artistic research and production.

Naeem Mohaiemen grew up in Tripoli, Libya and Dhaka, Bangladesh and now lives in New York. His work across films, installations and essays excavates historical ruptures via fiction, documentary and archives. Intertwined family stories and macro histories underpin his projects, which depart from transnational utopian projects that began to fall apart in the 1970s, when the high tide of decolonization ran into the reality of permanently entrenched capitalism.

Rashid Johnson
Anxious Audience

21 September 2019 – 10 May 2020
Opening: 20 September 2019, 8 – 11 PM

CURATOR: LAUREN BARNES
ASSISTANT CURATOR: AMIN ALSDADEN, RBC CURATORIAL FELLOW

Rashid Johnson stages a major new site-specific commission. Entering the Clerestory, we find ourselves surrounded by two monumental tiled panels, each containing an accumulation of nearly one hundred faces.

Ricocheting between the opposing walls of this narrow passage, these works are a continuation of Johnson’s series known as Anxious Audiences. The product of what Johnson has referred to as ‘drawing through erasure’, in which digging and scratching reveals faces within thickly layered black surfaces, each of these fields registers a character using the most basic inscriptions of personhood.

Johnson’s work harnesses the rich symbolism and histories of varied materials that have personal meaning and at times are signifiers of greater African-American cultural identity: Black soap, made from the ashes of burned plant matter and commonly used in West Africa, is mixed with wax and applied as pigment onto the white tiled surface— for Johnson, a way of complicating associations of cleanliness and healing. The rigidly uniform support equally evokes the tiles of subway stations as well as rational grids of minimalist art, and through Johnson's frenetically incised portraits a vivid impression of human presence emerges.

Johnson’s Anxious Audiences first came about from a desire to transmit his personal experience of anxiety, especially heightened by a political climate of increasing division in the United States. This audience scrutinizes us as viewers as much as the other way around. They are witnesses. Though these faces are presented on a shared plane, their solidarity is ambiguous: do we interpret them as united with a sense of togetherness in the face of collective unease, or might we understand this as an amassing of disparate individual experiences?

Above, high on the beams that run across the space, ceramic pots house a series of tropical plants. Each pot becomes a member of this audience, a face carved roughly into its surface. But on this alternative plane, high above the crowd, these vessels introduce a life force, a sense of potential, of caretaking and community.

Rashid Johnson (born 1977, in Chicago, Illinois) is based in New York City. He studied at School of the Art Institute, Chicago (2004–05) and Columbia College, Chicago (2000). Recent solo exhibitions include Aspen Art Museum, Colorado (2019); Museo Tamayo, Mexico City (2019); David Kordansky Gallery, Los Angeles (2018); Milwaukee Art Museum, WI (2017); Kemper Museum of Contemporary Art, Kansas City, MO (2017); Garage Museum of Contemporary Art, Moscow (2016); Hauser & Wirth, New York (2016); The Drawing Center, New York (2015); South London Gallery, London, UK (2012) and MCA Chicago (2012). He has participated in numerous international exhibitions including Yorkshire Sculpture International (2019) and the 54th Venice Biennale (2011). He received the Tony Goldman Visionary Artist Award (2017) and the David C. Driskell Prize (2012).

Birds of a Feather Stick Together
Sunday, 29 September 2019, 3 – 5 PM
Hajra Waheed is interested in how we are all connected. In her exhibition Hold Everything Dear, we see a video of a large group of birds flying, swooping and creating patterns in the sky. These birds communicate and move together without an individual bird taking the lead. In this workshop we will use folding paper to create geometric shapes that will come together to create a large-scale paper sculpture.

Coloured Stories
Sunday, 13 October 2019, 3 – 5 PM
The colour blue is used throughout Vincent Meessen’s exhibition Blues Klar. One video work in the exhibition, Ultramarine, focuses on various origins and meanings of “blue.” Participants in this workshop will learn about how colours are used to describe what we see. We will create an assemblage using found objects that are the same colour to tell a story.

DIY Survival Kit
Sunday, 27 October 2019, 3 – 5 PM
Naeem Mohaiemen’s film Tripoli Cancelled follows a week in the life of a man who is trapped living at an airport for a decade. How would you feel if you were stuck somewhere? What would you need? In this workshop, we will use travel-size objects to invent our own survival device that combines the tools and materials that bring us comfort.

Making Faces
Sunday, 10 November 2019, 3 – 5 PM
The site-specific installation, Anxious Audience by Rashid Johnson, presents two large-scale grids of abstracted faces carved into a soap and wax mixture. We will look at these faces and discuss what emotions they are expressing. In this workshop, participants will create multiple portraits using wax and watercolour paint resulting in a layered image.

PK Poetry Slam
Sunday, 24 November 2019, 3 – 5 PM
Vincent Meessen’s video installation, Ultramarine, features a spoken word performance by legendary poet, Gylan Kain. Spoken word is a performance art that focuses on the words used and how they are pronounced. In this workshop, we will learn how to put together words and rhymes to create poems. The program will end with an open mic for participants to share their writing.

We Are The Stars
Sunday, 8 December 2019, 3 – 5 PM
Through the cracks of the floorboards in You Are Everywhere, one of Hajra Waheed’s installations, we can see twinkling stars. They can be easily missed if you don’t pay close attention. In this workshop we will collectively create a large-scale alternate universe on black paper using paint with tin foil, plastic wrap, tape and marbles.

The Power Plant hosts this gathering on the occasion of the release of Made in Blue Republic exhibition catalogue, published jointly by Galeria Arsenal, and BWA Zielona Gora. Blue Republic is the collaborative artistic practice of Anna Passakas and Radoslaw Kudliński. Their artistic research comprises a range of disciplines, including multidisciplinary installations, ephemeral practices, performance, video and new media. Blue Republic has worked on projects foregrounding public spaces and the public engaged in them. They have exhibited widely at venues in Canada including the Darling Foundry, Montreal and the Doris McCarthy Gallery at the University of Toronto, Scarborough, as well as abroad at the Serpentine Gallery, London; daaagalerie, Berlin; and the Ludwig Forum for International Art, Aachen. Currently, Blue Republic is in Nature in Art exhibition at Kraków’s MOCAK. They divide their time between Krakow and Toronto, where they are represented by Georgia Scherman Projects.

Conversing with Mark Kingwell, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Toronto and Radoslaw Kudliński, their artistic practice of Anna Passakas and Kudliński will be in conversation with Mark Kingwell, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Toronto. Following the conversation and questions from the audience, the artists will sign books.

The year 2019 marks a half century of the iconic Sir George Williams “affair”, during which students at what is now Concordia University in Montreal occupied the ninth floor of the Henry F. Hall Building in protest against racial bias in grading. Through their occupation, the students – immigrants from the Caribbean, members of various black diasporas, and their allies – denounced racist pedagogical practices and the administration’s dismissal of students’ concerns. On the final day of the occupation, police entered the building, assaulting and arresting nearly 100 people. The former student protesters never received an apology. The events of the fourteen day student occupation remains a traumatic moment in Montreal history and represents a major instance of Black radical action in Canada.

During this performative lecture, Kaie Kellough, one of the organizers of a conference held to commemorate the occupation, called Protests and Pedagogy, will discuss and respond to the lingering legacy of this moment and its renewed relevance in the context of Vincent Meessen’s exhibition Blues Blair.

Kellough’s work emerges at a crossroads of social engagement and formal experiment. From western Canada, he lives in Montreal and maintains a strong relationship with the Caribbean, with roots in Guyana, South America. His books include Magnetic Equator (2019) and Domingo the Crossroads (Fall 2019). His novel Accordéon was shortlisted for the Amazon/Walrus Foundation First Novel Award. His vocal performance, recorded audio, and electronic narrative explore migration and the suspension of arrival.

Described by producer Woodie King as the “first ‘totally black film’,” Right On! features the original Last Poets, including Gylan Kain and Felipe Luciano, performing their radical poems on the rooftops and streets of Manhattan. This is not a “studio” film — it is a street film for the people. The performances are sharp, urban, radical, and clearly the beginning of today’s street-cool hip-hop culture. The performance is currently playing at the Harbourfront Centre, and includes a vocal performance by Kaie Kellough, one of the organizers of a conference held to commemorate the occupation, called Protests and Pedagogy, will discuss and respond to the lingering legacy of this moment and its renewed relevance in the context of Vincent Meessen’s exhibition Blues Blair.

Rita Fabiana
Performing the Institution(al) Today?
Friday, 25 October 2019, 4 PM

In 2012, the Museum of Modern Art held a symposium titled “How Are We Performing Today?” Focused on performance within the museum, speakers grappled with the subject of a “migration from the margin to the center of contemporary art [and museum] discourse.” It was an important opportunity to consider how the institution(al)—including their narratives, practices and audiences—can devise strategies to respond actively to subjects of representation, inclusiveness and cultural diversity.

Rita Fabiana looks back to look forward, considering recent years and the future of the Calouste Gulbenkian Museum, as a Portuguese and European institution. How has the museum been responding to questions of gender, migration, and colonialism through collection acquisitions, exhibitions, display policies and public engagement.

Fabiana is Head of Programming of the Calouste Gulbenkian Museum since March 2016. She has curated exhibitions of emerging, mid-career and established Portuguese and international artists including Ana Jotta and Ricardo Valentin, Leonor Antunes, Andre Guedes, Yto Barrada, Emily Wardill, Tamás Kaszás, Túlia Saldanha and José Escada. She is currently co-curating a project by Manon de Boer and Zineb Sedira. She has written artists monographs, contributed to exhibitions catalogues and taught graduate studies courses on curatorial practices.

Ángela Ferreira
Pan African Unity Mural
Saturday, 26 October 2019, 4 PM

The artist will focus on projects concerned with developing metaphorical and political statements from critical investigations into the relationship between buildings, films, music and the ongoing impact of colonialism, post-colonialism and neocolonialism on contemporary society. Projects like Maison Tropicale (2007), For Mozambique, (2008), Pan African Unity Mural (2018) and Dalaba Sal d’or (2019) will serve as starting points for a discussion and reflection on the unexpected history of personalities that have served as role models for a constructive representation of Africa.

Ferreira will also look at unique African trajectories and the richness of the intersections resulting from these circulations, by revealing sculptural, videographic and sound homages that reference figures including Bob Dylan, Jean Rouach and Miriam Makeba.

Ferreira grew up in South Africa and obtained her MFA at University of Cape Town. After resettling in Lisbon, Portugal, she earned her doctorate from Lisbon University where she currently teaches. Ferreira’s work is concerned with the ongoing impact of colonialism and post-colonialism on contemporary society. She represented Portugal at the 52nd Venice Biennale (2007). Her sculptural, sound and videographic homages reference economic, political and cultural history of the African continent whilst recuperating the work of unexpected figures including Peter Blum, Carlos Cardoso, Ingrid Jonker, Jimi Hendrix, Jorge Ben Jor, Jorge dos Santos, Diego Rivera or Miriam Makeba.

Denise Ferreira da Silva
Through the Question(ing) of Justice
Sunday, 27 October 2019, 2 PM

This presentation contemplates the question of what happens to the thesis of the (im)possibility of justice when considered through artistic practice, in particular when taking into account the limit(action)s of representation, and the urgency and duty to attend to how colonial and racial violence continue to rule in the global present. This exploration consists primarily in a reflection organized by the interrogations, questions and propositions introduced in three of Ferreira da Silva’s collaborative works: the play Return of the Vanishing Peasant (2014, with Ros Martín), the film A Sense of Place (2016 with Arjuna Neuman), and the exhibition Sensing Salon (2018) which included the relational art practice, Poetical Readings (2016, with Valentina Desideri)—as well as insights occasioned by the works of contemporary artists such as Otobong Nkanga, Carlos Motta, and Paulo Nazareth.

Ferreira da Silva is a professor and director of The Social Justice Institute-GRSJ at the University of British Columbia. Her academic writings and artistic practice reflect on philosophical, political, and ethical issues related to the workings of colonial and racial violence under the contemporary arrangement of global state-capital. Works in addition to those cited above include the film Waters-Deep Implicancy (2016) together with Arjuna Neuman, and the exhibition Sensing Salon (2018) which included the relational art practice, Poetical Readings (2016).
